

ISSUE 33 / January 2018 Dear Colleagues,

I am thrilled to announce that ASCPT's newest member offering is now available, a fully updated website live at www.ascpt.org!

This exciting new website has been several years in the making. It represents the needed updates to keep pace with the latest website technology, as well as member feedback to make our Society's website more user friendly. The new design provides streamlined menus and a clear navigation, bringing the information you have identified as the most important to the forefront of our www.ascpt.org pages. Some of the changes you'll see include:

- A cleaner, brighter layout with less text, making it easier to search for and find the content of interest to you;
- Easy access to the member directory, now listed as Member Search;
- Our Network and Community information is easily discoverable on the main page of the website;
- A reformatted member profile section, making it easier to make needed updates to your profile and provide information that you want shared with your ASCPT colleagues; and,
- A reformatted ASCPT Journal Family page, with quick access to PSPost and Translational Bytes, and one click access to the Wiley Journal hub page and Clinical Pharmacology & Therapeutics after member login.

In addition to these improvements, our new website is mobile friendly, allowing you to visit the site and view the content from any mobile-ready device!

I encourage you to visit the new www.ascpt.org site to see for yourself all of the improvements that have been made. As part of the transition to the new website, members will be required to update their password. To simplify this, we've created a one-step process for making this change. Simply log into the new site using your existing user name and the generic password ASCPT2018. You will then be prompted to update your password to one of your choosing.

As you navigate the new site, take the opportunity to update your member profile or register for the 2018 Annual Meeting, and feel free to contact members@ascpt.org for help or with questions or feedback.

I hope you enjoy this new site, which simplifies our content and increases the visibility of our offerings, making it a valuable member resource!
